Subject: Change in Name and Curriculum for the Women’s Studies Major and Minor

Dear Professor Knoesen,

The faculty of the Women and Gender Studies Program has proposed changing the name of the Women’s Studies major and minor to Gender, Sexuality and Women’s Studies, as well as significant curriculum changes to both. In accordance with the provisions of PPM 200-25, the proposal has been reviewed by Interim Dean Susan Kaiser—Division of Humanities, Arts and Cultural Studies, who has expressed her support for the proposal.

The College of Letters and Science Executive Committee has reviewed the request and recommends approval of the name change of the major and minor to Gender, Sexuality and Women’s Studies, as well as the curriculum changes proposed for both. On behalf of the committee, I am hereby forwarding the proposal to you for review and action by the Davis Division.

Sincerely,

Steven Carlip, Chair
Executive Committee
College of Letters and Science

Subject: Proposed Changes to WGS Curriculum,
Date: 19 December 2014

Background and Rationale

The Women and Gender Studies program at Davis is over 30 years old, having been established as the premier program within the UC, and the first to have dedicated FTE. In 2007 the Dean of HArCS commissioned an external review, which drew a number of conclusions, among these the need for the appointment of a number of new FTE and a new Director. To date 2 new appointments have been made, and the program is currently conducting a search to fill an assistant professor position. This renewed strength and energy enabled the program to follow up on other recommendations and conduct an in-depth appraisal and review of the curriculum, pedagogy, and student learning objectives during 2010-2011. Two all-faculty workshops were held in 2010, curricula from similar programs nationwide were surveyed, undergraduates, graduate students, and TAs were consulted, course evaluations were reviewed. Guided by our interest in consolidating the strengthened learning objectives of the program, existing courses were revised. New courses were piloted as special topics or seminar courses, and then submitted through the ICMS system. Among these, WMS 145, Women’s Movements in Transnational Perspective; WMS, 146 Gender, War and Peace; WMS 148, Science, Gender and Social Justice; and WMS 175, Gender and the Experience of “Race”; have been approved. These multiple methods of review, analysis, and curriculum development have generated the basis for the changes that are being proposed at this time. To provide a framework for the proposal we include the program’s student learning objectives here:

Program Vision and Learning Objectives

WGS produces students who will be able to:

- Comprehend and apply major theoretical approaches to the study of gender in local and international contexts
- Understand gender as historically changing and imbricated with race, sexuality, class, nationality, ability and other relations of difference (intersectionality).
- Proficiently apply research skills to approach questions within women and gender studies from multiple disciplinary perspectives, and to identify, assess and utilize sources from both print and electronic media--written and visual alike (interdisciplinarity).
- Effectively communicate critical perspectives on local and global manifestations of gender and sexuality, through written, oral and digital presentations to diverse audiences.
- Apply their training in critical gender, culture and sexuality studies to legal, political, economic and cultural change processes outside the classroom.

It is on the basis of this 2-year process of critical self-reflection, consultation with students, and field surveys that we are proposing the following changes.

Changes to the Major:

Replacing the current disciplinary tracks with 3 new interdisciplinary tracks.

The rationales for this change are as follows:

a) Consolidation of the interdisciplinary nature of the program in keeping with developments in the field worldwide over the last decade. The changes focus the curriculum in key thematic areas, and move to include critical gender studies of science and scientific institutions, in an effort to respond to the institutional profile and strengths of UC Davis, and the efforts to grow larger numbers of confident and gender-competent women scientists.

b) Consolidation of a transnational approach to gender studies, that takes the field beyond the somewhat outmoded US-centered area studies model. This means more studies that traverse national and regional borders to gain theoretical insights into global phenomena by examining disparate manifestations of similar phenomena at diverse locations (e.g. fashion, as in 138 Critical Fashion Studies; global policies and governance as in 182: Gender Globalization and Culture; or Islam as in 185: Gender and Islamic Discourses).

c) Consolidation of our interest in interdisciplinary sexuality studies as an important subfield within gender studies, characterized by the study of sexuality from feminist and queer studies perspectives that emphasize the social and historical conditions and power relations producing particular manifestations. We currently maintain a minor in sexuality studies.

d) Consolidation of a critical gender studies (or feminist studies) approach, over the previous ‘Women’s Studies’ approach. The program was renamed ‘Women and Gender Studies’ several years ago to signal this change in approach, but the old course WMS codes have remained on the books. Along with this proposal to revise the structure of the curriculum, we propose to change the name of the major to Gender, Sexuality and Women’s Studies. The addition of new and popular courses on masculinity studies, critical fashion studies and critical food studies reflect the shift to women and gender studies.

e) Social justice - reaffirming the program’s interest in civic engagement and the connections to social justice and women’s movements. This will be consolidated by re-energizing the internship, study abroad and work-study options, and developing new links with the surrounding communities.

The implementation of these developments will be realized through the institutionalization of the three tracks as proposed here.

Three New Thematic Tracks

We propose to replace the current disciplinary tracks with three new thematic tracks. The new tracks will better reflect the interdisciplinary approach and subject matter of the program, according to which all fields of study are approached with a conceptual framework that integrates intersectional and transnational conceptual perspectives with feminist theories of gender, and links scholarship with activism. This means drawing connections between critical analysis of gender and other social divisions, notably class, sexuality, race, ethnicity, nationality and global location, and developing connections between scholarship and social change processes. The program explores the possibilities for both local and transnational civic engagement, particularly involvement in feminist and social justice movements. Students pursuing the major and minor degrees in women and gender studies, and/or the minors in sexuality studies and social and ethnic relations have to meet the specified requirements. The updated list of courses offered by the WGS program include required core courses in WMS and a wide choice of specified restricted electives that are regularly updated according to the offerings for a given quarter. Students wishing to design their own tracks can do so in consultation with the faculty advisor.
Track 1: Social Justice, Gender Politics, and Activism

This track offers students a way to explore gendered features of economic, legal, political, and cultural processes and to critically reflect on social movements and policies in ways that are transnational and transformative. These modes of reflection and activism transcend the humanities and social sciences, and hence are at once feminist and interdisciplinary in their trajectories. Contemporary feminist approaches to social justice analyze gender as being imbued with other dimensions of inequity (nation, class, sexuality, religion, “race,” ethnicity, and other identities) in complicated ways that permeate histories, economies and cultures. This track explores the invention and reinvention of ways of being, doing, and becoming in a transnational world, based on principles of feminist justice.

Track 1: Required WMS Courses

Two of the following:

- 102. Gender and (Post) Colonialism (revised)
- 140. Gender and Law
- 145. Women’s Movements in Transnational Perspective (new)
- 146 Gender, War and Peace (new)
- 148. Science, Gender and Social Justice (new)
- 170. Queer Studies
- 175. Gender and the Experience of “Race” (new)
- 182. Globalization, Gender and Culture (revised)
- 187. Gender and Public Policy (in ICMS for revision)
- 192. Internship in Feminist Leadership and Organizational Change
- 193. Feminist Leadership Seminar (pre-requisite 192– to be taken concurrently) (revised)

Track 1: Examples of Restricted Electives from other fields (Two are required):

- Anthropology 126B: Women and Development
- Asian American Studies 112: Asian American Women
- Sociology 145B: Gender and Rural Development in the Third World
- Sociology 158: Women’s Social Movements in Latin America
Track 2: Culture, Power, and Resources

Drawing from, and extending the cultural studies model of the “circuit of culture,” this track opens up opportunities to study the ways in which processes of production, representation, consumption, identity and regulation interact in the real world, in ways that demand innovative interdisciplinary and theoretical approaches. This track will support those wishing to explore and reflect on subject matter that bridges studies of culture, science, and technology. Feminist theoretical interventions foster new ways of imagining the circuits of culture, power, and resources already evident in interdisciplinary studies of environmental justice, fiction, fashion and textiles, film and new media, food, health, material culture, war and peace, and other fields. This track will support those wishing to explore and reflect on subject matter that bridges studies of culture, science, and technology.

Track 2: Required WMS courses

Two of the following:

136. Critical Food Studies (proposed new course in ICMS)
138. Critical Fashion Studies (revised)
139. Feminist Cultural Studies
148. Science, Gender and Social Justice (new)
160. Women, ‘Race’ and Sexuality in Postcolonial Cinema (revised)
162. Feminist Film Theory and Criticism
164. Gender and Cinematic Representation (in ICMS for revision)
165. Feminist Media Production (revised)
176. Autobiography, Narrative, Memoir (proposed new course in ICMS)
178a-h. Women Writers and the Transnational Imaginary
180. Writing by U.S. Women of Color (in ICMS for revision)
182. Globalization, Gender and Culture (revised)
185. Women and Islamic Discourses
Track 2: Examples of Restricted Electives from other fields (Two are required):
Anthropology 126B: Women and Development
German 114: From Marlene Dietrich to Run, Lola, Run: German Women and Film

Track 3: Sexualities, Subjectivities, and Body Politics
Courses in this thematic track provide introductory and advanced explorations of gender, sexual, “racial,” ethnic and class subjectivities and social relations as socially and historically constituted, to manifest in individual lived experiences. This track explores the theoretical and material bases of identity formation, embodiment, social regulation, and the ongoing dynamics of contestation in multiple arenas. Particular attention is given to the relationships between bodies and subjectivities and the ways in which various forms of style and body work may be used to fashion and change identities. Courses consider how the meanings attached to bodies and to products are shaped by transnational and local power relations. In what ways do biological and social issues intersect to produce subjective ways of knowing and being? How do the interconnections between gender, sexuality, class, ‘race’, ethnicity and other subject positions open up opportunities for new ways of knowing?

Track 3: Required WMS Courses
Two of the following:
130. Globalization and the Politics of Family Change (in ICMS for revision)
136. Critical Food Studies (in ICMS for revision)
138. Critical Fashion Studies (revised)
158. Masculinities (in ICMS for revision)
160. Women, ‘Race’ and Sexuality in Postcolonial Cinema (revised)
170. Queer Studies
174 Body Politics (proposed new course in ICMS)
175 Gender and the Experience of “Race” (new)
176. Autobiography, Narrative, Memoir (proposed new course in ICMS)
187. Gender and Public Policy (in ICMS for revision)
Track 3: Examples of Restricted Electives from other fields (Two are required):
CHI 120 Chicana/o Psychology
ENG 166. Love and Desire in Contemporary American Poetry
NAS 134 Race and Sex

New Courses: New Course Proposals Associated With the New Tracks

As a result of the program’s collective curricular development work six proposals for new courses were submitted through ICMS. Most of the proposed new courses were successfully tested and developed under special topic or seminar rubrics. Four of the six have been approved, while the remaining two are in progress. Several other courses were revised and renamed and submitted for review through ICMS. The majority of these have been approved. This activity has been ongoing during the last 3 years. Apart from bringing the program up-to-date, these courses are essential to the new tracks outlined above. They also reflect the new teaching interests of the two additional social scientists who have joined the program, and furthermore reach across to investigate the gendered nature of scientific institutions and epistemologies, to address the identified interests of the science students currently taking WMS 50, Introduction to Critical Gender Studies and expressing an interest in relating critical gender studies to science. In 2014/15 the program is conducting a search for an assistant professor. We hope to appoint a candidate with expertise on the intersections of sexuality studies and science.

Six New Courses

145. Women’s Movements in Transnational Perspective (4) (Approved and in 2015/16 Catalog)
Lecture/discussion 3 hours; term paper. Transnational perspectives on twentieth and twenty-first century women’s movements in Western, colonial and post-colonial contexts, examining movement’s forms and political orientations and relationships between women’s movements and other forces for change. ArtHum or SocSci, Div | AH or SS, OL, WC, WE.
146. Gender, War and Peace (4) (Approved)
Lecture/discussion- 4 hours. Applies a critical gender perspective to militarism as manifest in contexts of military rule, war, conflict, peacebuilding and security post-conflict. Addresses the changing configurations of gender and sexuality in military institutions and militarized economies and cultures from an interdisciplinary perspective. ArtHum or SocSci, Div | ACGH Or DD, WC, WE.

148. Science, Gender and Social Justice (4) (Approved and in 2015/16 Catalog)
Lecture/discussion- 4 hours. Critical reading and reflection on the history of Western science, scientific institutions and the role of science in relation to inequalities of class, race, gender and sexuality, and global struggles for equality and justice. ArtHum or SocSci, Div | AH or SS, DD, WC, WE.

176. Autobiography, Narrative, Memoir (4) (In ICMS)
Lecture/discussion- 3 hours; term paper. Exploration of life writings by women; emphasizing the significance of transgressive voices; race, class, and sexuality, women's silence, erasure, censorship, and marginalization are addressed. The politics of memory, narratives, storytelling, and editorial judgment are also considered. Students will read theories of autobiography, autoethnography, memoir and life narrative asking questions about how writing about the self is gendered and how representations of the self fare in the outside world. An important aspect of the course will be examinations of how women use changing media (particularly blogging) to author the self. May be repeated for credit.

174. Body Politics (4) (In ICMS)
Lecture/discussion- 4 hours. The focus of this course is the body as a site where status inequalities and boundaries are formed, suffered, upheld, and transgressed. The course will examine the politics of beauty, the production of the self through body work, normalizing discourses and practices in medicine, the social production of disability, the use of gendered metaphors in medicine, the embodiment of racial, gender and class structure, and the body as a vehicle for political action.
175. Gender and the Experience of “Race” (4) (Approved and in 2015/16 Catalog)
Lecture/discussion- 4 hours Exploration of the co-construction of “race” and gender in comparative national historical contexts and contemporary lived experience. Study of intersections of race and gender in identities and how institutions, labor migration, social movements and consumption shape racialized gendered identities. ArtHum or SocSci, Div, Wrt | ACGH, AH or SS, DD,WE.

Changes to Existing Courses: Updating current courses to reflect content and major changes

Where excellent teaching is already being carried out, courses have been left unchanged. For others, listed below, the content has been revised and updated on the basis of the findings of the internal review, and bearing the new tracks in mind. This is to ensure overall coherence and close synergy between new and existing courses.

Updated catalog entries (existing courses with new titles and or descriptions)

Lower division courses:

50. Introduction to Critical Gender Studies (4) (Approved and in 2015/16 catalog)

Participants will develop transnational and feminist perspectives on the differentiated and unequal effects of globalizing institutions around the world. GE credit: SocSci, Div, Wrt.

187. Gender and Public Policy (4) (In ICMS)
Lecture/discussion—3 hours; term paper. Prerequisite: upper division standing and a course in Women’s Studies. The role of gender in the creation of social policies, especially with respect to issues brought into the policy arena by contemporary feminism. Offered in alternate years. GE credit: SocSci, Div.

189. Special Topics in Critical Gender Studies (4) (Approved and in 2015/16 catalog) Lecture/discussion—4 hours. Prerequisite: one course from the Women’s Studies major. In-depth examination of a women’s studies topic related to the research interests of the instructor. May be repeated one time for credit when topic differs.

192. Internship in Feminist Leadership (2-12) (In ICMS)
Internship—6-36 hours; written report.
Prerequisite: completion of a minimum of 84 units and consent of instructor; enrollment dependent on availability of intern positions. Supervised internship and study in an approved institutional setting. Final written report to critically reflect on gender in the internship experience. (P/NP grading only).

193. Feminist Leadership Seminar (2) (Approved and in 2015/16 catalog)
Seminar—2 hours. Prerequisites: WMS 50; course 192 concurrently. Use feminist methods to critically reflect on the ethical, methodological and strategic aspects of an organization, project, campaign, movement or other social change initiative. May be repeated for credit. (P/NP grading only).

195. Thematic Seminar in Critical Gender and Women’s Studies (4) (Approved and in 2015/16 catalog)
Seminar—4 hours. Prerequisite: two courses specified for women’s studies major. Group study of a topic, issue or area in feminist theory and research involving intensive reading and writing. May be repeated for credit when topic differs. Limited enrollment. GE credit: ArtHum or SocSci, Div.

197T. Tutoring in Critical Gender and Women’s Studies (1-4) (In ICMS)
Tutoring—3-12 hours. Prerequisite: upper division standing and consent of director. Leading small, voluntary discussion groups affiliated with a Women’s Studies course. May be repeated for credit for a total of 8 units. (P/NP grading only).
Name Change

Simultaneously with this request to revise the curriculum, the Women and Gender Studies program is submitting a request to change the name of the Women’s Studies major to Gender, Sexuality and Women’s Studies. The existing name, expressed in course codes as “WMS” reflects the program’s origins over 30 years ago as an interdisciplinary program focused on women’s culture, history, politics and socioeconomic positions. The Women and Gender Studies Program requests the name change in order to bring the name of its major in line with its curriculum, and with naming conventions within the field. The program has regularly revised its courses and curriculum to keep them current and relevant. As a result, the current major’s name no longer adequately conveys the content of the major. We therefore request your consideration of the change of our major from Women’s Studies to Gender, Sexuality and Women’s Studies.

New Website

In addition to proposing changes to the curriculum, the program website has been redesigned, to improve its appeal and ensure that it can better serve as the major public interface of the program and so offset the administrative cuts and increasingly limited student service capacity of the past 3 years. This will be used to promote the new tracks and generally strengthen the profile of the program, as well as carry relevant news and information concerning the program and field.

The new website introduces the program as follows:
Women and Gender Studies is an interdisciplinary program founded on the understanding that the social production of gender is inseparable from that of race, sexuality, class, nationality, ability and other categories of difference. Our curriculum places feminist concerns within a transnational context, while respecting the need for geographic and historical specificity. These frameworks inform our teaching, our research, our institutional and community practices, and the principles we bring to our classrooms.
Women and Gender Studies offers a wide range of classes that use the lens of gender to examine colonialism and post-colonialism, globalization, history, sexuality, queer theory, literature, popular culture, feminist video production, area studies, film, fashion and food. We also offer students the opportunity to earn internship credits, conduct independent research, and write an Honors Thesis.

The Women and Gender Studies Program at Davis offers both an undergraduate Major and Minor. We also work collaboratively with other units on campus to sponsor two undergraduate minors, Sexuality Studies and Social and Ethnic Relations, and an undergraduate concentration in transnational production and consumption. On the graduate level, we are affiliated with the Designated Emphasis in Feminist Theory and Research and work very closely with the Cultural Studies Graduate Group. We invite you to read more about our program and explore the many options that Women and Gender Studies has to offer.
