PPM 200-45: Time Reporting System

December 2, 2011

This review is in compliance with UC Davis Policy and Procedure 200-45. The Senate has been asked to review and opine if desired concerning a computer system development proposal. This project may have little impact on Academic Senate members; therefore, review is optional for all committees.

UCD CAFR established review procedures for the 2011-2012 academic year on October 9, 2011. After CAFR review, the proposed Time Reporting System was found to not raise any concerns related to academic freedom.

Dear Professor Bisson,

The L&S Executive Committee has reviewed the proposal to implement the UC Irvine Time Reporting System (TRS). The committee strongly believes that UC Davis should not consider spending $390,000 (for year one) on a new TRS, which is due to become obsolete within a few years (see p. 12, "long-term sustainability of application").

The present campus TRS, developed in-house, is adequate. The proposed new system, in fact, is based on our TRS, with some enhancements. As UC is looking forward to implementing a system-wide TRS in the next few years, switching to a new one, in the interim, at great expense, does not seem sensible.

Sincerely,

Abigail Thompson, Chair
Executive Committee

Given that the University is in the planning stages of developing a system-wide time reporting system, it would seem to make more sense to continue with our current practices with the expectation of a UC system in the future.
