

March 12, 2020
Sent to Academic Senate and Academic Federation Members

Dear Colleagues,

We write to provide additional information about resources to help you continue planning your final examination options for winter quarter 2020.

- The Keep Teaching website is constantly evolving and updated frequently as more resources become available for instructors and students:
  - Some students may not have access to computers with webcams and microphones to take their online final exams. By tomorrow, information will be added on where students can go to take their final exams if they do not have a working computer. There are currently 250 stations (70 with webcams) with more being added. Information and Educational Technology (IET) is leading this effort.
  - We have heard student and faculty concerns that not all students have access to private testing space required by Examity. Thus, UC Davis has authorized Examity to permit students to take an exam in a shared space. You will receive a report of students who used shared spaces, and any suspicious test behaviors will be flagged.
  - Your originally assigned final exam space and time (during March 16-20) will remain available for your students to access should they want to use that space.
  - There is a suggested template that you can use for your online final exams to remind students about academic integrity requirements.
  - There is updated information about facilitating student evaluations of teaching.
- Student Affairs has compiled an expanded list of student study spaces for finals week.

These are extraordinary challenges and disruptions that we are collectively facing. We greatly appreciate everyone's continued efforts.

Thank you,

Ralph J. Hexter
Provost and Executive Vice Chancellor

Kristin H. Lagattuta
Chair, Davis Division of the Academic Senate